India is booming, especially in the aesthetic industry, and more people than ever before are becoming aware of how they look and how that makes them feel. What's more, aesthetic and cosmetic procedures aren't limited to celebrities alone and now there is direct access to all sorts of therapies. On this account, the aesthetics and wellness market may touch US $20 billion over the next two years with equal weightage to vanity for men as well as for women. Still, the sector in India is in the infancy stage and at this point, the market is fragmented and in need for a real player who will change the lives of many. To bridge this gap and offer exclusive services to the ones who understand and value the aesthetics and beauty concept, the Wave Group, a leading business conglomerate has launched Reva Aesthetics in the capital of the country.
